Alarm as pupils are approached by strangers

A YEAR 7 pupil was offered sweets by a stranger in a village near Haverhill – and another child was approached by two men in a car.

The two frightening incidents took place in Linton on October 13 and 19 respectively.

Police were called to the first incident at 4pm in the afternoon, after a Linton Village College student was approached by a man with a bicycle.

He is described as white, aged 20 to 25 and of average build. He was wearing a black hooded top with a pattern on it.

pattern on it.
Caroline Derbyshire, headteacher of Linton Village College, said that the boy was then offered sweets by the stranger.

She went on: "The little boy in Year 7 acted absolutely perfectly. He said: 'I don't like sweets,' and then he ran. He acted very sensibly."

A police officer spoke to representatives from Linton Village College and Linton Heights Primary School after the incident, who then notified other schools in the area. HANNAH MIRSKY J@HannahMirskyCN

The second incident was reported at 5.40pm on the Monday, when a member of the public told police that her daughter had been shouted at by two men in a car. The vehicle was described as a grey saloon, and the men, aged 19 to 25, both had beards.

Police inquiries are ongoing, and parents of children at schools in the village and across the South Cambridgeshire cluster have been informed about both incidents.

Police are advising residents to remain vigilant, and to report any suspicious behaviour to them.

There is nothing to suggest the two incidents are linked, and the descriptions of the men involved in each are different.

A spokesman for Cambridgeshire police said: "We take all reports to us seriously and are investigating the two incidents. We have increased patrols in the area as a precaution and we are working with the local schools, colleges and community to get messages out to parents."

Linton Village College has been educating students about what to do or say if a stranger approaches them.

Henry Batchelor, district councillor for the village, said: "It's quite concerning in a village the size of Linton where most people know each other."

each other."

Ms Derbyshire added: "As a parent myself in the village, I think there does need to be a level of additional vigilance. It's always tempting to think that things are safe when you live in a close-knit community."

Call Cambridgeshire police on 101, or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111, if you can help.

A FIGHTER jet from a West Suffolk air base came plummeting to the ground yesterday – killing its American pilot.

Eyewitness Patrick Turner described the crash as a "massive fireball", adding: "The flames were huge. There was no way anyone was getting out of there alive."

The California-based F/A-18 Hornet had left RAF Lakenheath and was on its way back to the US when it came down in Redmere, near Shippea Hill, midway between Lakenheath and Ely – at around 10.30am.

development, Haverhill's Nayland Road, was approved on appeal in June, after being denied planning permission by St Edmundsbury Borough Council in July 2014.It is a project of Havebury Housing Asociation, the largest affordable housing supplier in St Edmundsbury

The appeal decision led to outcry from local residents and councillors, who formed a Garage Action Group (GAG). They have been campaigning for Havebury to abandon the project, including forming a picket line outside a meeting between town councillors and the Havebury board last

The action group has also presented a petition against the development with 950 signatories to Haverbury chief executive Karen May-parking, disruption to residents, and the high volume of housing being planned elsewhere in the town.

At a meeting of the town council's planning committee on Tuesday night, town councillor and chair of GAG Maureen Byrne detailed the action group's activities and described a telephone call she had with Ms Mayhew.

Cllr Byrne said: "I reminded her that the residents feel that Havebury is riding roughshod over them, ignoring local councillors, ignoring borough and county councillors."

Ms Mayhew told the Weewkly News: "We try to take into account varying views. People have felt very strongly about this particular site.
"We have to take each site on its own merits. We on the other hand have to take into account community views. In no way does our board want to upset local people."

The Nayland Road development - and another garage site development in Haverhill's Cambridge Way - are part of a Havebury drive to build hundreds of homes. Havebury Housing Association has promised the government it will provide 400 new homes by March 2018. The organisation's development director Scott Bailey estimates that around 150 of these homes will be built in Haverhill it-

It is hoping that most of these new homes will be on brownfield sites, which have previously been used for other buildings. Many of these are likely to be small sites of a few homes near the town centre

Mr Bailey added that the plans for thousands of new homes on the North-West Haverhill and Great Wilsey Park development will not necessarily lead to adequate social housing provision. He went on: "The smaller sites, we can contract when they come forward, and get going on them now.'

Building on the Nayland Road site will begin in November, and take about eight months to complete.

A TOWN centre landmark that has been derelict for over a decade could be put to use again – as the town council is funding a survey to see if renovation is possible.

At a meeting on Tuesday night councillors approved funding a full structural survey of the Corn Exchange in Haverhill's Withersfield Road. The landmark was built more than a century ago but has been unoccupied for years.

The council hopes to share the results of the structural survey with the borough council's conservation officer. The officer could then use it to require the current owners, an Irish bank, to carry out the repairs.

At the meeting, councillors expressed their concerns that the Victorian building should not be left to fall into disrepair.

Cllr Tony Brown, who spearheaded a campaign in 2013 to have the building turned into a heritage centre, said: "If we want something done with that building we have got to do it ourselves. The survey is a lot of money, but it's part of our town's heritage."

Other attempts to put the building to use have failed because of the high costs involved in such a project.

Councillors agreed that they would wait until after the survey before making any further decisions about whether to get involved in renovation of the building.

We need more shops, soon

AS the latest addition to what one local councillor called our "thriving High Street" nears completion, the funeral parlour, that was Morleys, bites the dust.

It is the latest in a long line of shops to give up the retail ghost. We have also noticed the planning application in the window of the former Party shop for proposed flats. Shame on you if that gets the go-ahead. What about the proposed PoundStretcher move into the old Co-op site? It seems to have gone guiet all of a sudden now that St. Edmundsbury own the lease.

Perhaps the artist's impression in the paper a few weeks ago has something to do with it: a new Jubilee Town Square and bus terminus. Looking at this plan, it looked as if the Co-op site and the shops next to it seem to have vanished. This so called "Vision" will take years, so get PoundStretcher in there now.

We need action for shops now. As for the new bus terminus, how many attempts did it take to get the bus shelters right? And we still haven't got the electric bus times like the ones in Bury St Edmundsbury seem to be rubber stamping every application for housing - nearly 4000. Haverhill is becoming the "go to" place for cheap housing without the infrastructure in place first. Bury sees us as a dormitory town. It seems that we get the houses and Bury get the shops. However, while this new proposed retail park with Lidl, Pets at Home and Home Bargains is a good move, it won't solve the High Street problem.

This latest proposal to dual the A1307 – how is this going to draw people into Haverhill, they are just going to get out quicker. I can't see many Cambridge people coming to Haverhill for our shopping experience. Put the money towards a railway link and put us back on the map and get people out of their cars. We have a lot going for us with good sports facilities, a cinema, arts centre and food shops but it's decent shops we need. Why can't we attract New Look and Bon Marche back or even get an M&S. Other towns seem to be able to attract a whole range of new shops.

The latest government initiative to let councils be in control of the business rates will surely help, so there shouldn't be any excuse for the extortionate rates that are being charged now. Reduce these rates to encourage shops into the town and raise the rates for charity shops. We don't want vanity projects we need shops and plenty of them.

Create a perfect blend

DOES anyone on the planning committee ever actually consider how a new build will blend in with existing architecture?

Do planners ever visit a site before giving the go-ahead? The wooden clad estate unveiled in Withersfield

Dualling is not the answer

THIS call to 'dual' the A1307 is facile in the extreme. Firstly, ignoring the cost, let us examine the benefits. As I presume no-one expects large swathes of Linton to be demolished, we are looking at a new, and longe

The time saved for commercial traffic will be minimal, if any is saved at all, for most of the day.

Where do the holds ups for commercial traffic come from? Well the blanket 40mph speed limit on HGVs was a problem, but this has been restored to 50mph on single lane carriageways, subject to the national speed limit, hardly less than the 56mph allowed on dualled roads

The main choke point? The rush hour, especially around Linton in the

This could be more easily, and effectively, and I would guess more cost effective, solved by the provision of a Light Rail System from Haverhill to Cambridge, (but please, dear God, no stupid Guided Buses).

With a stop near Linton school I suspect that much of the school traffic would be removed from the road, which, with the removal of much of the rush hour traffic, should ease congestion considerably. (It would be nice if the carriages could accommodate bikes as well).

A railway could benefit many, many people along the route, and remove a lot of cars from the road.

Whilst none of us like duelling with the A1307, dualling it is not the answer. It is time to ask the right question.

£100k refurb for arts centre

TOWN councillors have approved a £100,000 refurbishment of the Haverhill Arts Centre – in a bid to make it more "comfortable" for visitors.

At a full council meeting on Tuesday evening, councillors agreed to give $\Sigma 70,000$ to the Haverhill Arts Centre for technical equipment and a further $\Sigma 30,000$ to the Haverhill Community Trust to decorate and refurbish the studio, auditorium, bar and cafe.

The technical refurbishment will involve installing new lighting and sound systems in the arts centre's main auditorium.

They will replace aging systems that cannot be repaired. The lighting will also be more flexible, with dimmer settings from 0 to 100, and provide better lighting for events such as meetings which take place in the main hall rather than on stage.

tems for live and cinema events, which are currently separate. Much of the sound system was bought by the council secondhand 10 years ago, and replacement parts are now difficult to source.

Arts and leisure manager at the Haverhill Arts Centre Nick Keeble said: "In terms of coming to see shows, we can do a little bit more. It will be more comfortable.

"At the moment the lighting we have is very patchy. We hope that the sound that we've got already is of a high quality, but we are looking to improve on that, especially for cinema and spoken word events."

Plans to refurbish the downstairs cafe and studio areas have not yet been finalised, but they will include the replacement of 20-year-old furniture.

Mr Keeble said: "It's all about upgrading and making the place better and more comfortable."

The auditorium will close for two weeks from the start of January for the installation of the new sound and lighting systems. Other parts of the arts centre may also close for refurbishment in January

At the council meeting, Cllr Quillon Fox said about the auditorium: "The lighting is pretty poor. It's a great idea that we can do this to keen the centre going."

The money for the refurbishment will come from council funds earmarked for the purpose.

Street lights may be switched off

STREET lights across the borough could be turned off overnight.

At a meeting of St Edmundsbury Borough Council's Cabinet on Tuesday evening, councillors voted in favour of transferring over half of the 3,027 street lights owned by the borough to county control.

As part of the transfer, the county council is looking to implement part night lighting, with the street lighting it owns being turned off from midnight to 5.30am.

At the meeting, cabinet member for operations, Peter Stevens, said: "Basically, of the 3,000-odd street lighting assets or columns that we have, they are largely out of date now."

He said that as part of the transfer they could be upHANNAH MIRSKY @HannahMirskyCN graded and have timer units He went on: "Savings can be made in turning some of those lights off overnight. There are statistics that show that crime does reduce when the lights are turned off."

During the two years after part night lighting was introduced in other areas of the county, there was a 26.32 per cent drop in crime from 12am to 5.30am within 40 metres of the lights. According to the same report by council officers, crime within 80m of the lights dropped by 18.28 per cent.

The report adds that there were not enough traffic accidents within 40 and 80 metres of the lights to determine whether the reduced lighting had any effect on road safety.

The initial total cost of transferring the lights will be £1.81m.

The total annual savings from transferring the lights, if part night lighting is adopted, would be £156,500. This would mean that the initial outlay would be paid back within 10 years. If part night lighting were not adopted, it would take 12 years.

The cabinet's decision on the lighting is subject to approval by full council.

The issue will be discussed and decided at St Edmundsbury's next full council meeting.

Ex-boyfriend made phone threats

A MAN admitted threatening his partner, telling her that "her days were numbered" after she said their relationship was over, a court has heard.

Daniel Allen, 20, had become angry and called Debbie Thomas on her mobile phone to make the threat.

Last Thursday, Ipswich Crown Court was told that Allen, of no fixed address, made threats to travel to Haverhill where Miss Thomas lived, saying he was going to "kick her head in."

Prosecuting, Matthew Sorel-Cameron said that, during the call, Allen made Miss Thomas feel vulnerable. He told her that she would need to "keep looking over her shoulder"

The couple had been in a relationship from November last year until February this year The relationship ended, it was said, when Allen had allegedly assaulted her. Despite parting, they maintained daily contact but in April Miss Thomas told Allen their relationship was at an end. Upon hearing this, Allen became angry and was arrested and told not to contact Miss Thomas but he phoned her to make the threats.

Mr Recorder John Foy QC adjourned the case for further information about Allen.

Drug dealer to pay £10k

A MAN from Kedington who admitted being involved in the sup-ply of illegal drugs has been ordered by a judge to hand over more than £10,000.

Michael Cornelius, 46, of School Road, was jailed for 33 months at Ipswich Crown Court after pleading guilty to two offences

Last Thursday, Cornelius reap-peared in court via a video link from HMP Peterborough for a Proceeds of Crime Act hearing.

The court heard that specialist financial investigators had established that Cornelius had benefited from his crimes by £77,872 and had assets amounting to £10,320.

Prosecuting, Matthew Sorel-Cameron said that an estimated £6,000 of what Cornelius owned was his share of his home and relied on it being sold. Mr Recorder John Foy, QC, ordered that Cornelius should hand over £10,320 within the next three months or face a further six months in prison if he fails to meet that deadline.

Cornelius had pleaded guilty to being concerned in the supply of cocaine and possession of crimi-nal property when he was jailed in

Police officers with a warrant had searched his home in Kedington on July 23, 2014 and seized thousands of pounds in banknotes and a set of electronic scales and knife, both of which contained traces of cocaine.

Pub owners find fame with TV's Four in a Bed show

FAME: Ian Holt and Tracy Andrews run the Old Red Lion in Horseheath

A PUB'S full English breakfast was awarded the best marks ever in a TV competition series. Ian Holt and Tracy Andrews, who run the Old Red Lion in Horseheath, took second place after being filmed for two weeks earlier this year for Four in a Bed, which is shown weekdays on Channel 4.

The programme pitted the pair's hospitality efforts against three other B&B owners from other parts of the country, in a week-long show. The Old Red Lion is a pub, restaurant and 12-room guest house and owned by Greene

Ian said: "We were not allowed to say anything until it had been on air so it was quite a tricky few months keeping quiet. The week of the broadcast was nervewracking as we were watching it for the first time ourselves along with all our customers, but thankfully I think we came across pretty well."

In the programme, four B&B owners took turns to visit and rate each other's guest houses. The Old Red Lion was placed second overall, and won special plaudits for its breakfast, which scored 10/10 from all three of the other B&B owners, a series best. Ian commented: "We do put a lot of extra effort into breakfast. It is a full English with a twist, including black pudding bon bons. Since the show broadcast we have had plenty of interest in our rooms, bar and restaurant, but particularly in our breakfast." The Old Red Lion has had thousands more visits to its facebook page, and been the talk of the village after its week-long TV appearance.

Ian added: "It was quite an experience taking part. There were some strong personalities involved, and everyone had a different type of hotel, so inevitably there was a little bit of confrontation.

"We are glad we did it though, and it was a very proud moment to see the Old Red Lion on national TV."

Heroic brothers in arms remembered

In the run-up to remembrance day, the Haverhill News is publishing a series of articles delving into the town's wartime history and telling the stories of the people who sacrificed so much. This week, Charmian Thomps on of Haverhill's Family History Group tells the story of five brothers who fought in the best friend Ted Broughton were Second World War.

THIS is the story of Horace James (Jim) Willis, his brother, Reggie Arthur Willis and his best friend, Edward Christopher Broughton. Confectioner and baker William Willis, his wife Barbara and their family of nine children lived in Duddery Road and later Recreation Road. During WW2 five of their six sons enlisted.

Jim's best friend was a lad called Edward Broughton (Ted), who was a neighbour when the Willis family lived in Duddery Road. They both worked at the International Store in Haverhill, they both went to work in a store in London and in January 1940 they both joined the Royal Army Service Corps, as privates with consecutive regimental numbers. After initial training they were posted to France but within weeks of arriving they were evacuated from Le Havre as part of Operation Dynamo (Dunkirk).

In November they were sent overseas again, this time to Greece. With the German advancement forcing the Al-lies back through Greece they found themselves being evacuated for a second time. On April 27, the Dutch liner SS Slamat, carrying troops in-cluding Jim and Ted, left a harbour south of Athens too late to escape an attack by aircraft from the Luftwaffe. The Slamat sank with the loss of 193 men. Around 700 men were rescued by the destroyers HMS Diamond and HMS Wryneck, both of which were later bombed and sunk, drowning most of the survivors of the Slamat. In 41 seamen and eight soldiers saved from this triple disaster, leaving a total death toll of 843 men. Both Jim Willis and his reported as being lost at sea. They are commemorated on the Athens Memorial.

The youngest of the five Willis sons to enlist was Jim's brother Reggie who joined the RAFVR as a Flight Lieutenant. In March 1943 he was posted to 265 Squadron in Mombasa. On August 20, 1944, Reggie was the Navigator in a Catalina which encountered the German submarine U-862 near Mozam-

The Catalina was shot down while attacking the U-boat which escaped unharmed. Reports from the U-boat crew suggested that after being severely damaged by AA fire the Catalina was deliberately and heroically steered by its crew onto a crash course with the Uboat but it fell short by 30 metres. There were no survivors. Reggie Willis is commemorated on the Alamein Memorial

ECVE CHRISTMAS IN HAVERHILL

Don't let overindulgence ruin

ALL IN IT TOGETHER: But when it comes to food/drink combinations, pace yourself!

EATING your bodyweight in turkey and chocolate is part of the joy of Christmas, right?

There's nothing wrong with loosening the belt a little and enjoying the treats on offer - it is just once a year, after all – but with estimates totting our average Christmas Day calorie intake to around 6,000, according to the British Dietetic Association, it's little wonder many of us are left lolling on the sofa, groaning in discomfort come the EastEnders special (not to mention kicking ourselves when we step onto the scales come January).

Want to crunch your way through Christmas without all the overindulgenceinduced punishment? Tuck into this guide for starters...

INDIGESTION AND HEARTBURN

Here we go, second helping of turkey in and suddenly

'Tis the season to eat, drink and be merry, but festive overindulgence comes at a cost. Nel Staveley dishes up some top tips for keeping those uncomfortable and painful side-effects there's the genuine panic that your stomach lining is about to explode, soon followed by pain, belching and acid reflux/heartburn.

Yup, we've all been there. "Occasional indigestion linked with stress or over-eating is common," says GP and nutritionist Dr Sarah Brewer. "If simple antacids aren't strong enough, tablets that switch off acid production are available over the counter."

Milk Thistle, a traditional herbal medicine, may also help ease over-indulgence, indigestion and an upset stomach.

■ Prevent it: You might not want to hear it, but Rob Hobson, head of nutrition for Healthspan, says: "Try eating smaller meals and waiting a short time before you decide to eat a second help-ing of food. Eating slowly can also help, as you stimulate the enzymes required for digestion.

"Go easy on fatty, rich foods, as these take the longest to digest and so aggravate indigestion and heartburn. Try to choose more of the starchy carbohydrates and lean proteins on offer, as they can help to stimulate more bile and

improve digestion."

Hobson also stresses:
"Mint tea is useful to relieve bloating but not heartburn, as it relaxes the gut wall which may encourage reflux."

CONSTIPATION

Never ideal, but certainly not when there's a houseful of guests waiting for the bathroom... "Constipation is an embarrassing condition that can be due to not eating enough fibre [from fruit, vegetables, wholegrain cereals] and not drinking sufficient fluids," explains Brewer.

Use an over the counter remedy, or go old-school and just up your quota of fruit and veg (no, another roast potato doesn't count, sadly). Make sure you drink enough water too.

■ Prevent it: "Taking fibre supplements can help to maintain healthy bowels," says Brewer. Or, in the short-term, you can just balance out your piles of rich turkey/sausages with fibreheavy vegetables – the BDA advises that a third of your plate should be veggies (and again, roast potatoes don't count).

OUT FOR THE COUNT: Losing the plot is always going to let someone down....

BLOATINGOh the joy of the sprout: looks horrible, tastes horrible, then leads to even more horrible gas (due to tiny sugars that are hard for the body to digest). Combine that with general overstuffing of other foods, and it's no wonder things get a little 'windy' after the festive feast.

Dr Brewer recommends artichoke supplements "as one of the best supplements for feeling bloated", and explains: "It rapidly increases liver production of bile to improve digestion and can be taken before or after a party."

Hobson adds: "Try soothing teas such as chamomile, ginger and peppermint after your meals."

your meals."

Prevent it: Go easy on the sprouts, obviously, and also go easy on the speed you devour your grub. When you wolf down food, you let too much air into your digestive tract and also fail to chew properly, meaning larger pieces of food will be trapped in your stomach, and your digestive system has to work harder to break everything down, all contributing to that feeling of bloating.

HANGOVERS

A Healthspan poll revealed that most women rate their stress levels as seven out of 10 during Christmas – and one in 20 said they tended to drink more alcohol as a result. They're not the only ones; apparently the average festive season booze consumption in the UK is a hangover-from-hell-inducing 62 units ing 62 units.

Everyone has their own views on what constitutes a good hangover cure, but nutritionists suggest hot water with lemon, ginger to ease nausea, and low GI foods like porridge to up your blood sugar levels slowly. And drink a lot of water to rehydrate yourself too.

Prevent it: The old ones are the best: be mindful of how many units you're consuming, alternate alcoholic drinks with water, don't drink on an empty stomach, and drink a pint of water before you go to bed.

Board games: It's best to be at CHRISTMAS: Basically it's a tricky combination of being on your best behaviour and allowing your sense of mischief to have a bit of a fgree rein. Ultimately, you probably can't win so you might as well enjoy it!

WE all love a board game at Christmas, don't we? But after a few drinks and waiting on players who take forever, it can all turn a bit sour. Nel Staveley reveals some winning board game etiquette

Christmas and board games may go together like turkey and cranberry sauce, but sadly, the combination can leave a slightly more bitter taste.

However much the phraseology of 'game' and 'play' might try and tell you otherwise, sitting around a board with tipsy family members (you have generally avoided for the other 364 days of the year) can only end in unmitigated dis-

Of course, some people don't even bicker over the rules; they just ignore them – a survey by games company Gibsons found that cheating caused 36 per cent of all game-related grievances, closely followed by just making up the rules (29 per cent).

But it's not all bad news: "Games are designed to be fun," Gibsons' managing director Nick Wright reminds us.

Here are some tips on sticking to that mantra...

LAY THE GROUND RULES EARLY

To avoid arguments over what's right and wrong at the end of a game, make things clear at the beginning. "Make sure that everyone is aware of the rules and the consequences of cheating before starting to play," advises Wright. It might seem a bit planning overkill, but it will also save you wanting to kill anyone in an hour's

DON'T TRY TO PROVE ANY-THING

Desperately competitive at board games? You might think it's a sign vou're one of life's winners. but actually, it just proves you're one of life's wannabes. "If you are playing the game to increase your level of significance, it would be good to look inside yourself and ask, 'Is it important to be a winner or is it important to have fun, be playful and connect?" says life coach Sheridan Sloan. "If you err on the side of needing to win, it is indicative of potential low selfesteem or a lack of confidence."

BE GRACIOUS

However annoyed you are that your ten-year-old granddaughter royally trounced you at Trivial Pursuit, never let it show. "It is just as important to be a gracious winner as it is to be a gracious loser," Sloan stresses. "You should always congratulate your opponent whether you win or lose and always allow for a rematch at a later date to regain or preserve your title of King or Queen of monopoly.

BE OVER 55

Age might not always bring the wisdom to tolerate foul play, but it does bring enough confusion and gluttony to not really notice it. The Gibbons survey revealed that while cheating causes almost half (45%) of all fall-outs in the 18-24 age bracket, adults aged 55 and over were apparently likely to be too full from dinner to concentrate on family games and therefore have no idea it's even happening.

IT'S ABOUT THE LONG GAME, NOT THE END GAME

Easier said than done, perhaps, but try to remember the idea of playing a game is to actually play it, not just win it. "At Christmas time or any other time when playing with friends and family, it is key to remember the primary gain is to connect with the ones you love. You are not playing for money and therefore you do not have a need to win that outweighs any observation of good board game etiquette," points out Sloan.

SEVEN WAYS TO CHEAT -AND GET AWAY WITH IT If all that advice has gone over your head and you still want to cheat, here's how to important when playing to win but you need to be just as aware of your body," explains Sloan. "As a lie detection expert, I am trained to spot a whole range of tell-tale signs that give someone's game away – literally – and if you want to play to win then you need to be aware of these body language signs when at the table with your fellow players."

■ Make sure you don't avoid

- eye contact as this is a telltale sign you have something to hide.
- Don't get defensive and deflect playful comments about what cards you're holding or game strategy you are using, as this will tell them more about what you're doing than if you gave them your game plan directly.
- Try not to swallow or clear your throat more often than usual. Having a cup of tea or a glass of wine is a great do it... antidote to this, but make "Your psychology is all sure you don't reach for your drink too much, as that can

- also give you away.
 Keep your fidgeting to a minimum and if you want to negate someone's comment to throw them off course, be careful about your shoulders. People who shrug asymmetrically are lying and it is very hard to do a genuine sym-metrical shoulder shrug, so instead, make sure to keep them stationary and down.
- Don't try to make up a story to cover up what you're doing and remember that less is more. Keep the conversation to anything but the game it-
- self.
 Make sure your posture is not defensive as this is the most obvious tell-tale sign and is the easiest one picked up by other players. So avoid acting tense, crossing your arms or creating a physical barrier between you and the other players. Keep your posture relaxed and laid-back and use open gestures to avoid looking defensive.

Reel Culture MAKE MORE NOISE! Suffragettes in Silent Film (PG) on Monday 26 October at 7.30pm, is a fascinating compilation of 21 short films combining newsreels and documentaries with early comedies from the BFI archives. Electric cars lead the new charge for green

A RECENT surge in interest in electric cars means that new buyers are having to wait for their new vehicles as global orders outstrip supply around the world.

A national car leasing company says it's finding lead-in times for orders on electric cars are lengthening as people turn their backs on petrol and diesel cars for a greener driving style.

The Flexed.co.uk company says that the Volkswagen emissions scandal is being cited as the prime reason customers are ordering electric cars as they look to become green drivers, as well as running costs at just a few pence per

"We've seen enquiries for electric cars go through the roof in recent weeks," says Flexed. co.uk 's Mark Hall, "Petrol and diesel cars just remaining essentially static.

Instead, says Hall, it's all-electric cars that are currently leading enquiries for motorists. And an analysis by Go Ultra Low shows that 20,992 motorists made the leap to plug-in power between January and September this year, bumper growth of 138.5 per cent against 2014. Fuelling the demand is a greater choice of models, with more than 27 pure electric or plug-in hybrid cars now available, ranging from high-performance sports cars to capable family run-arounds. The new data shows consumer appetite rising rapidly for plug-in hybrid models with demand accelerating ahead 226.5 per cent against 2014 with 14,041 registrations.

Not only that, Hall says, the new buying trend is for fully-electric cars, with hybrid sales

Mitsubishi leads the new registrations charge with 9,303 of its flagship Outlander PHEV sold since the start of 2015. Nissan follows with its all-electric LEAF racking-up 4,285 registrations, and BMW's i3 is the nation's third most popular ultra-low emission vehicle, also nearly doubling its tally with 1,564 registrations.

Glyn Hopkin making good progress

OUTSTANDING financial performance in 2014 has enabled Glyn Hopkin, the South-East based, multifranchise car dealer group, to make significant progress through the ranks of the Sunday Times Top Track 250, one of the leading independent assessments of UK business performance. Glyn Hopkin's record full-year 2014 sales of £351.4 million secured the group a 26-place rise to 62nd in this year's league table

The Top Track 250, which ranks British mid-market growth private companies with the biggest sales, is published in The Sunday Times and Sunday Times online. It spans companies with sales between £140m and £650m and includes brands such as Pret A Manger Aston Martin and Chelsea Football Club.

Glyn Hopkin's turnover for the full year 2015 is expected to exceed £400 million, putting the company on track to achieve its goal of a £500 million turnover within the next three years. First-half 2015 profits before tax amounted to

£3.536.793, representing an uplift of 19.81 per cent compared to the same period last year. In the first half of 2015 Glyn

Hopkin sold over 8,300 new cars and its rate of growth is almost three times greater than that reported by the rest of the UK motor retail sector.

Fraser Cohen, managing director of Glyn Hopkin, said: "Our organic growth is fuelling our expansion into new territories and with new brands. We have recently opened several new dealerships and created a brand-new Renault and Dacia showroom in Chelmsford."

The 11th annual Sunday Times Top Track 250 awards took place on Thursday 8 October at the Jumeirah Carlton Tower Hotel in London with quest speakers Saiid Javid. Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills; Andy Rubin, Executive Director of Pentland Group; and Lord Bamford, Chairman of JCB.

Coinciding with the publication of the league table, Nissan Motor (GB) announced that Glyn Hopkin has achieved a top place in the Vehicle Sales Retailer of the Quarter category in its Dealer Recognition Programme, after an excellent period for both brand and dealer.

With passenger car sales reaching 88,000 in the UK, Nissan's combined passenger car and light commercial vehicle first-half 2015 market share has risen to 5.7%. Its award winning Qashqai continues to enjoy phenomenal success as the best-selling SUV and fifth best-selling car in the UK outright.

As part of this success, Glyn Hopkin recently celebrated a major milestone by achieving its 100,000th Nissan registration since its first dealership opened in 1993. The landmark underlines Glyn Hopkin's status as one of the largest and fastest-growing Nissan dealer groups in the UK. To find out more visit glynhopkin.com.

Sorrento & the Bay of Naples charm from its every pore.

In-form Rovers progress in cup

GOALS from Martyn Farrant and Nick Wilderspin gave Haverhill Rovers a 2-1 win at Mildenhall Town in the second round of the Suffolk Premier Club on Tuesday.

Rovers made them pay for their mistakes when Farrant equalised in the 64th minute following a corner.

The winning goal came in the 76th minute when Wilderspin fired into the corner after Luke Haines' shot had been blocked.

On Saturday, Rovers twice came from behind to draw 2-2 at Kirkley & Pakefield in the Thurlow Nunn League, Premier Division.

The hosts took the lead in the eighth minute but Perry Moody equalised in first-half stoppage time from the penalty spot.

Kirkley had a player sent off on the hour but
